Letters from Readers: Ray Pinsent: The trouble must be either with the wiring or with the battery of the back doorbell. Try using the four cells on the front bell. If it works properly it indicates that the wiring is at fault. There may be a bad connection somewhere in the wiring itself, or at the battery or the bell push, or it may be that the wire is not wide enough to pass the current. Ordinary bell wire should do all right.

Middle Park Formed in 1906: Only One Premiership Won: The Middle park Cricket Club is one of the oldest clubs competing in the First Grade of the V.J.C. A. Formed from the Albert Park Druids' Cricket Club in 1906, it has competed in this completion continuously: ... (discussion) ...

Backbone of Club: Practical and appreciated support was given to the club in this venture by the South Melbourne Cricket Club, and the wicket was laid down under the supervision of "Ted" Lockwood, the South Melbourne curator. In the past season the club has lost the services of A. Pinsent, who was undoubtedly the backbone of the club in recent years. His record with the club dates back as far as 1911. Pinsent was also the secretary of the First Grade of the VJ.C.A. for a number of years and was elected a life member of that body this year. The club has been successfully carried on by Jack Rutter (hon. secretary), assisted by a strong committee, of which Mr. Mark Aarons (president) and Mr. A. Renshaw have rendered valuable service. With such colts as E. Lynott, H. McKee. F. Relf, G. Brice, W. Allen. W. Smith, H. and J. Rutter. N.

Pinsent, S. Tims, R. Beseler, W. Wearen and A. Lumsden, the club has bright prospects of figuring in a final before long.

The Sydney Morning Herald (NSW: 1842-1954): Tuesday 19th January 1932

PRIME MINISTER'S APPEAL: To the Editor of the Herald: Sir, the recent appeal of the Prime Minister to every section of the community to try and spend reasonably – and not hoard – should be received with satisfaction by all, as in times of financial crisis the public become more or less panic-stricken and hang on to every possibly penny in dread of what the future may bring forth. The recent amalgamation of the Commonwealth and State savings banks has to a very great extent inspired confidence. And the very laudable restraint of the depositors when the doors were recently opened has done much to bring a return to normal once more. There are, however, still may dark clouds on the horizon as far as New South Wales is concerned, which must be removed before public confidence is restored. I refer to one particular instance. The Moratorium Amendment Bill which by its unfair conditions has ruined quite a number of small mortgagees and has caused many millions of capital to become frozen has utterly smashed confidence in real estate for the time being, and eliminated the sanctity of contract, and further has subsidized dishonesty. There would be available for loan on mortgage large sums of money if the Act was less one-sided. This money is being deposited in savings or invested in other low interest-earning investment, and quite a lot is still being hoarded. This sort of thing must continue until restrictions on private enterprise are removed and investors can feel there is some protection for their capital. When this happy state of things returns there is every reason to believe that large sums of money now being held at short call will circulate freely and go into permanent investments. Let us hope that in the near future some of the absurdly restrictive measures will be removed and at least a considerable amount of our old-time confidence be restored, I am, etc., A. Pinsent, Jan. 18th.

The provision of the turf wicket would raise the status of the game. In response, Mr. O'Connor spoke of the great work done for the V.J.C.A. by Mr. Arthur Pinsent as secretary, and the high regard in which Mr. Rutter (Middle park's delegate) was held in the association. There were more important things than winning premierships and Middle Park had shown cricket a great service by training for executive work such men as Mr. Pinsent and Mr. Rutter. He congratulated the S.M.C.C. for acting on the principle that "the boy of yesterday in the champion cricketer of tomorrow." He was glad that the old idea of drawing back seniors into the junior ranks had passed away. The V.J.C.A. was doing everything possible to develop junior players. The Mercury (Hobart, Tas: 1860-1954): Saturday 6th January 1934

TEACHER-TRAINING: INQUIRY INTO PROBLEMS: The Australian Council for Educational Research has been inquiring into problems in teaching training. In its latest circular it asks: "What Is the value of practical teaching experience obtained before the professional training of the intending teacher?" There used to be no question about this, writes the director, the experience being considered essential for elementary but quite unnecessary for secondary school teachers. Now, however, there is a considerable conflict of opinion. In an attempt to gain some light on this problem, Arthur Pinsent, of the Department of Education, University College, Aberystwyth, Wales, undertook an analysis of the records of some 800 students who had passed through the training department. In the "British Journal of Educational Psychology," June, 1933, the following summaries are made: - Pre-college teaching experience appears to be significantly connected with teaching grade achieved in the professional year (i.e., the year of professional training) in the case of men but not the women students. The type of experience is more important than the amount of it. Student teacher experience seems, on the whole, to be little better than no experience at all. Among women students, the experienced groups do not show any significantly better results than the inexperienced groups. This is probably due to the fact that other influences mask the effects of experience. Within the limits here represented - approximately 23 years to 25 years of age - there is no connection between teaching achievement and age. In men students there is no significant connection between academic record or the abilities measured by intelligence tests and teaching grade. With teaching experience constant there is a significant connection between success in the theory papers taken at the end of the professional year and the teaching grade.

Bankruptcy Discharge: Woman's Losses in Hotel: Mrs. Frances Isabel Reichelt, formerly licensee of the Hotel Pinsent, Wangaratta; was granted a discharge from bankruptcy by Judge Lukin in the Bankruptcy Court yesterday. The estate was sequestered in September 1930. The assets were set down at £225 15/1- and her liabilities at £968 3/5: The Official Receiver's report; stated that Mrs. Reichelt took a five years' lease of the Hotel Pinsent at a weekly rental of £70. Stock valued at £600 was to be paid for at the rate of £100 a month. Accommodation at the hotel was extended and the rent was increased by £5 a week. For a time the business was prosperous, but owing to the: diversion of tourist traffic to Mount Buffalo, trade fell away and the rental was reduced to £24 a week. That concession, however, did not make the business profitable. His Honor directed that the discharge should operate from 31st October.

LEAVING FOR BERLIN: United Kingdom Delegation LONDON: September 16: The United Kingdom delegation to initiate discussions on the commercial and fiscal relations between the United Kingdom and Germany as affected by the new German machinery for the control of imports and the allocation of foreign exchange will leave London for Berlin to-morrow. The delegation will consist of Sir Frederick Leith Ross, chief economic adviser to the British Government, and Mr. Saint Quentin Hill, of the Board of Trade, and will be joined by Mr. Pinsent, financial adviser to the British Ambassador in Berlin. The whole question of outstanding German debts will be discussed with the Bradford Chamber of Commerce by representatives of the Federation of the Master Cotton Spinners' Association of Yorkshire, the woollen spinning industry and the coal exporting and shipping interests of the north-east coast. The Scottish Exporters' Association may also be represented. A deputation may shortly proceed to London to renew discussions with the Government on the difficulties experienced by the cotton, wool, and coal trades.

Although Middle Park seem to be in some danger in their match, the club has got together a fine even combination this season. In batting splendid service is being given by A. Gravell, R. Jones, W. Smith, H. Rutter and H. McKee, whilst the bowling is remarkably strong in the hands of E. Lynott, K. Jones, J. Noceda and W. Allen, with B. Solomon giving fine support as keeper. The teamwork they are displaying reflects the greatest credit on their captain and coach, Arthur Pinsent. On the administration side, the club is fortunate in having the services of Mr. T. Eldrige as president, Mr. J. B. Darnley secretary, Mr. J. Ruttor treasurer, Mr. R. Rowe an delegate to the V.J.C.A., and Messrs. S. Davis and L. Bracken as committeemen. Mr. H. Dowell, the curator, is now turning out wickets equal to any in the association. This is the best season Middle Park has had for many years.

Grazier Allegedly Drove while "Under the Influence": Three persons sustained painful injuries when car collides with motorcycle: Fined £15, Gives Notice of Appeal: That he drove a motor car while under the influence of alcohol was the charge against Richard Standish Falkiner, 29 years, grazier, of Pircarra Station, Darlington, at the South Melbourne Court, on Wednesday. Benjamin Emmett, of Colac, related that, on January 31, at 9.30 a.m., he was driving a motorcycle with sidecar north along Ferrars Street. He pulled up at the road sign 'Stop' at the intersection of Park Street. He looked to the right, and saw no traffic coming. Then he proceeded to cross. When level with the kerb line he saw a car coming, it was said, at a fast speed in a westerly direction along Park Street He applied his brakes, and was stationary when the car crashed into the cycle. His father was thrown from the sidecar to the roadway, he was jerked on to the handlebars, and Ronald Pinsent, riding pillion, was dislodged. All three were injured — Mr. Emmett, senr. Very seriously. Defendant, the driver of the car, alighted in his stockinged feet. He appeared, it was alleged, to be in an intoxicated condition. They were taken into a nearby house. It was further said that, when Mr. Emmett, senr. in' distress rose from the couch, defendant occupied it in a 'slovenly attitude,' and Mr. Emmett, senr., had to go upstairs. A constable came, and said to defendant, 'You are not fit to drive. What drink have you had?' It was said defendant replied, 'Three drinks about an hour ago.' Witness said he and the two others injured were taken to hospital. To. Mr. N. Mitchell (for defence): We had reached the first line of rails when struck; The car never applied brakes before the collision. It had ample time to stop. The fact of defendant sitting on the sofa and making the injured stand showed me he was drunk. He told the injured man to 'shut up' when he was moaning. He made no inquiry whether anyone was injured. Ronald Pinsent said that the evidence of the previous witness was correct. Constable E. Hobley said that, called to the scene, he saw the car and motorcycle, both damaged, on the roadway, the former on the front, the latter on the right side. He went into the house and, he said, saw defendant lounging on the sofa. He appeared 'to have had a deal of drink. He told the man, 'I want to see you outside.' and, it was averred, defendant staggered. He got from him the ignition key, and drove him to the police station. On the way he said, 'You have had more than three drinks.' And, it was declared the man said, 'Yes, I've had a good few.' Asked, 'How did the accident happen?' defendant said, 'He stopped in front of my car; I couldn't pull up quick enough.' He left the defendant at the watch-house. When he returned, twenty minutes later, Constable James said, 'This man has been to an all-night party, and hasn't been to bed yet.' In his opinion, defendant was not in a fit state to drive a car. To Mr. Mitchell: He has a naturel impediment in his speech. His face was as red as beetroot cooked. He did not ask for a doctor. Constable E. James, watch-house keeper, said he asked defendant, 'Have you been drinking all night?' and was told, 'No, not all night.' In his opinion, the man was definitely under the influence of liquor. Constable Daniels: He was between the counter and the wall, and the space did not seem wide enough for him. He had everything on the floor — cigarette papers, tobacco, etc. He was decidedly under the influence of liquor. Senior-constable Arblaster: I said to defendant, 'Where have you been to get so drunk at this time in the morning?' He said, 'I've been to a party.' Mr. Mitchell contended that defendant's condition could be determined only by a thorough clinical examination. Defendant had a serious impediment to his speech. He was excited as a result of the accident and being taken to the police station. Defendant told the Court he went to the Princess Social Club, Spring Street, city, about 10 p.m. Between 10 p.m. and 3.30 a.m., he had had two glasses of beer. He played cards, then drove one of the members home, and went back to the club. He had a glass of beer with Mr. Roper, the manager, and at 7 a.m. he had breakfast at a cafe. After, he went to the Spencer Street railway station to find out when the train left for Darlington. With Mr. and Mrs., Roper, he drove to Park Street. (He was not under the influence of drink. He had 6 drinks between 10 p.m. and the time of the accident. Sergeant Teese: You admitted having had eleven drinks. Now you say you had only six. Defendant: I told you definitely, as far as I can remember. I was worried and distressed with the accident. I did ask the injured men how they were. Sergeant Teese: You did not make any objection to being charged with driving whilst under the influence. Why did you not ask the police to get a doctor to examine you? Defendant: It never entered my mind. I was worried about smashing up my mother's car. Sergeant Teese: You said to Senior Constable Arblaster, 'Wasn't I full?' Defendant: I don't remember saying that. Dr. S. Ferguson said he had been attending defendant ever since birth. He was not quite normal and always swayed when questioned. His mind was not logical. His impediment of speech was habitual. Sergeant Teese: You could not give an opinion how eleven drinks would affect him? Dr. Ferguson: How could I? It would be purely hypothetical. I have never seen him take a drink. Sergeant Teese: It would affect his ability to drive a car? Dr. Ferguson: It would influence his natural disabilities, but not his mechanical abilities. Mr. Meehan P.M., said that, by a majority decision, defendant would be convicted and fined £15, costs £4/13/5. His licence would be cancelled. Mr. Mitchell, giving notice of appeal, obtained a stay of fourteen days.

“Power King” Career of London-Born Clerk who made and lost millions. Death came suddenly in Paris last month to Samuel Insull, the financier, who began his career as a London office boy, rose to be an American multi-millionaire, and then saw his life’s work crash in ruins ... (continues with discussion of legal problems in the United States and elsewhere) ... When he returned to London last year, Insull told a reporter, in reference to his years of trail; “I have been talked about, written about, lied about – all I want now is to be allowed to live the life of a private citizen.” For a number of years, Insull owned an English home. In 1928 he took over Pincent’s Farm, at Theale, near Reading, a 14th Century farmhouse standing just off the Great West Road. The estate comprised 360 acres, and Insull had the whole place renovated and many improvements made. He sold it in 1936.

Middle park's Success in Turf Selection: The coach (A. Pinsent) of Middle Park is very optimistic regarding the team's prospect of winning the premier ship this season. The return of Ted Lynott, the fast bowler, after some years with St. Kilda, has definitely imparted hostility into the attack, bringing the bowling strength into line with the best teams in the competition. To date Lynott has taken 28 wickets at an average cost of only 7.3 runs. His best performance was registered last Saturday, when he dismissed seven Fairfield batsmen for 34 runs. Roy Beseler is also doing good service with the ball, and R. Treasure and T. Morrissey, who were well up in the batting last season, are again scoring freely. J. Acquiroff is keeping wickets in an accomplished manner. Although only 18 years old, and playing his first season with the club, he impresses as one of the best 'keepers in the competition. He is expected to rise in the sport. P. Smith, who was out of the seconds for a couple of rounds, is again bowling at his top. Last season he headed the V.J.C.A. second eleven bowling list, and has been selected to go to Tasmania with the Association team at Christmas.

"I think so, Rinda," he said ... (continues into story) ...

And, indeed, it was not Bullock but Rinda who was summoned to Scotland Yard later in the day. Someone had noticed the girl at the driving wheel of a car parked not far from the scene of the morning raid, and had given Inspector Joshua Playfair a moderately accurate description of her. She duly reported at the Yard and agreed, under protest, to a voluntary search. After all, there was nothing on her person or in her car that she minded the Inspector seeing. The stolen rings had already been disposed of. "Miss Sweetling," said Playfair, in explanation of these activities. "Your car was seen this morning in the neighbourhood of Pinsent Street Tottenham. Who was it who was with you?" "Pinsent-street, Inspector?" said Rinda vaguely. "The name means nothing to me. I lost my way going back into town from Barnet and I really couldn't tell you what streets I passed through until I got to the Nag's Head." ... (continues) ...

Fiction: ... Australian Writers: Another Enjoyable Novel has been Published: ... “Black Mastery,” by Jeremy Turtle (Hodder and Stoughton) is a first novel of unusual promise. The author sets a vital group of characters in a Devon scene and unwinds an enthralling spy plot. Sir Henry Lunscombe, professor of history at Oxford, has information affecting the relations of England and Italy, and J. Edgar Pinsent, paid servant of Rome, wants to get it from him or prevent him from passing it on. With Sir Henry’s manor, Black Mastery, is besieged by Pinsent's men and all lines of communication cut, there is a deadlock. Pinsent shows his ruthlessness by committing a cold-blooded murder, and an amazing situation develops. Neither side can afford to have the police investigating too closely, and an exciting wild-goose chase of the Devonshire moors is arranged. The showdown comes as a shock, but it is not incongruous though a lapse into melodrama in the last few pages weakens an otherwise excellent story. No doubt the public will be entertained with more of the villainous exploits of J. Edgar Pinsent, who is rather a likable murderer. ...

Advocate (Burnie, Tas.: 1890 – 1954): Wednesday 26th April 1939

Fiction: A Spy Story "Black Mastery," by Jeremy Turtle (Hodder and Stoughton). In his first essay into the world of fiction. Jeremy Turtle has written fantastic story of espionage activity in a wild and remote part of England where lives Sir Henry Lunscomb in the house, Black Mastery (from which the book takes its title), which his forbears built from the profits of the slave trade. Sir Henry, an Oxford Professor of History, has other possibly more important duties' also; he is a British secret service "post box," clothing his activities in the guise of a scholar visiting Continental libraries at intervals, and by this means developing a new system of code. His secret being discovered by Italian agents in Rome when he has a message of vital importance which may lead to war between the two countries, in his possession, he is told that he will not be killed, "because the Foreign Office would then act as if what it believed to be the case were true." but that his silence will be secured by threats. He is closely shadowed until his return to Black Mastery, where his wife, nephew and the latter's friend are awaiting him. Mr. J. Edgar Pinsent, an American, who "kills for his masters with politeness and regret, and is known to be incorruptible," and his satellites then lay siege to the place on behalf of the foreign Government, and the urgent need to get the vital message to the Foreign Office in London is the focal point in the ensuing battle of wits, during which Mr. Pinsent regretfully kills a friend of the Black Mastery menage, and thus sets in motion a set of circumstances that causes more complications. The means by which the message at length is got through to its destination comes somewhat as an anti-climax to a spate of attack and counter-attack, but for its exciting action the book will hold interest throughout. Published in England only this year the book was well received there.

Fiction: Review: Black Mastery (Mr. Jeremy Turtle): This is a modern "spy" story of unusual merit, which has been well received in Great Britain. Sir Henry Luscomb, a professor of history at Oxford, a cultivated man with a love for "old manuscripts", is actually working for England as a "post office" or spy for the diplomatic-service: While in Rome he was entrusted with important information. J. Edgar Pinsent, an American, is employed by Italy to prevent the message reaching Whitehall. This leads to exciting encounters, making intensely interesting reading. Book Review: "Black Mastery" This book has not yet been issued for public sale, but if you like exciting fiction, watch for it is a first novel, by Jeremy Turtle with a very topical setting and an unusual plot. It concerns Sir Henry Lunscomb, Professor of History and research scholar, whose frequent journeys throughout Europe have been utilised by the British Government to make him a courier between the Foreign Office and its agents in various capitals ... Events soon prove that that is so, when Jim Lunscomb, Sir Henry's nephew and ward, and his friend, Sam Lewis, find the moors infested with suspicious characters, including a remarkable American, J. It is Pinsent's job to prevent Sir Henry from conveying to the Foreign Office an important message which may cause or prevent a war. ... (continues) ...

Glenn Innes Examiner (NSW: 1908 – 1954): Saturday 24th June 1939

Fiction: "Black Mastery": lack Mastery,' Jeremy Turtle's first novel, is reminiscent of Robert Louis Stevenson-book title, and author's name alike. Jeremy Turtle should have sailed with Long John Silver aboard; the 'Hispaniola' outward bound for treasure trove, instead he wrote a book with the literary style of one who is on nodding acquaintance with Stevenson, and others at his ilk. 'Black Mastery' is a book of high adventure and intrigue with the present European situation as its theme, the central figure being Sir Henry Limscombe, a country gentleman, Oxford professor and foreign office spy — amateur, of course ... Not many people know that a race for hunters used to follow the Caulfield Cup. That however, was the case in 1881, the year when the judge missed Woodlands in the Caulfield Cup and did not place him, although many people thought he had won. The members of the Findon Harriers Hunt Club provided a gold cup valued at £100 for the winner of the Findon Harriers' Gold Cup, which was a handicap steeplechase for bona-fide hunters ... (description of race) ...

The Miller family played a conspicuous part in the race. Mr. Edward Miller ran two horses, and Mr. Albert Miller two. Mr. S. Miller, who in the nineties was chairman of the V.R.C., rode Marquis and had a fall and had his face badly cut. Mr. Edward Miller's other two runners were Sir Robert (Mr. Darlot) and Apparition (Mr. Cummings). Mr. Albert Miller started Findon and Edith. Mr. Miller rode Findon but he entrusted Edith to Mr. R. Ray. The other riders in the race were Messrs. J. Simpson, T. H. Bourke, W. Gratton, W. J. Pinsent. William Godfrey Watson. Webb, J. Crooke. Clarke, Highett. Woods, and Curie. They were very sparing in the use of initials in reports in those days. The race was repeated the following year, and again 21 horses started.
